ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Special appreciation is extended to Dr. C. C. Colvert, Consultant in Junior College Education at the University of Texas, for his encouragement of this project. Joint compiler, Miss Anne Bailey, Periodicals Librarian, Fondren Library, Southern Methodist University, consulted voluminous published material for relevant dissertation listings.

Dr. William K. Ogilvie, Coordinator, Community College Service Center at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, Illinois, is responsible for the classification of the dissertations and the preparation of the author index.

Final organization and publication of the bibliography were under the direction of Jesse R. Barnet, Staff Associate, and Sheila Kirschbaum, Information Associate of the American Association of Junior Colleges. Miss Abigail Booth and Mrs. Susan Vitek, AAJC staff members, rendered extensive secretarial and research assistance in preparing the several drafts of the bibliography.

Those responsible for developing the bibliography have made every effort to incorporate all pertinent dissertations. In certain cases, a dissertation's formal title did not clearly identify the content as specifically concerned with the junior college. In these instances, AAJC exercised an editorial judgment in deciding whether the dissertation should be retained or omitted from the bibliography.

The junior college today is a rapidly expanding and maturing segment of our system of higher education. Its programs, problems, and potential warrant continuing and searching analysis. With the publication of this bibliography, it is hoped that scholars will be encouraged to undertake further research and investigations in the field of junior and community college education.

The compilers are grateful to the American Association of Junior Colleges for publishing the bibliography.

SELECTED DATES IN THE HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

1902 Through the influence of William Rainey Harper (1856-1906), the 13th and 14th grades were added to the high school in Joliet, Illinois, giving Joliet Junior College the distinction of being the first publicly supported junior college established in the United States.

1907 Through an act of the State Legislature, California's public high school districts received permission to introduce "post-graduate" courses approximating the lower division curriculums of the university.

1910 Fresno City College was established as the first junior college in the California system.

1917 California's State Legislature vote $90 per student annually to support junior colleges.

1920 The American Association of Junior Colleges was formally organized at a meeting in St. Louis, Missouri.

1930 The first issue of the Junior College Journal was published in October of the year.

1930 The North Carolina State Supreme Court upheld the legality of levying a property tax for the support of a public junior college.

1948 The report of the President's Commission on Higher Education advocated the establishment of additional tuition-free, public two-year colleges and suggested the name "community college" for institutions designed to serve chiefly local community educational needs.

1957 The President's Commission on Education Beyond the High School again urged expansion of junior colleges in the United States.

1960 The W. K. Kellogg Foundation extended substantial financial support for the establishment of the Junior College Leadership Program at ten American universities, and for the expansion of the program and services of the American Association of Junior Colleges.

1963 The 88th Congress passed the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963 incorporating special provision for matching grants to public two-year colleges for the construction of academic facilities. Private junior colleges are also made eligible for financial assistance under the general terms of the legislation.

1964 The Educational Policies Commission, in its report Universal Opportunity for Education Beyond the High School recommended the extension of free public education to include at least two years beyond high school graduation.

1964 Total private and public junior college enrollment in the United States exceeded 1,000,000 students for the first time.
